CALL TO FARM HELP

FARMERS SHOULD GIVE SEVERAL DAYS NOTICE

MANY TO GO TO FIELDS

Plenty of Assistance Will Be Provided If Needs Are Reported to the Commercial Club

With wheat cutting time almost at hand there is beginning to be a demand for farm help. Secretary Claypool, of the Commercial Club, who is looking after the matter of securing help, urges that the farmers who will need assistance let him know in plenty of time. Where it is known that extra help will be needed, his office should be notified several days in advance, as with but a day's notice, men who have agreed to leave their stores and offices find that it sometimes requires several days to provide substitutes and make their arrangements to leave their business.

Secretary Claypool points out that there is plenty of help available to take care of the crops this summer, a large number of business and professional men having agreed to give a part of their time in the harvest field, but that in order that the work may be expedited the farmers should advise several days in advance just how many men will be needed for a certain period so that the required number may be notified to make their arrangements.

The harvest of the wheat crop will begin in most parts of the county within the next few days, it has already started in the southern part and a large number of men will be called.

It is also urged that farmers living near the other towns in the county, and who will need extra help for a few days or a week, let it be known as far in advance of the time as is possible. If this is done there will be no occasion for any fields to be neglected.

A farmer who phones in a call today requesting that five men be sent to his place tomorrow, will likely be disappointed, as at least two days' notice is asked by those who have enrolled to go.

PROCLAMATION BY MAYOR.

To the People of the City of Maryville:

As Mayor of the City of Maryville, I desire to direct your attention to the statement of the President of the United States, designating June 28th, 1918 as War Savings Day.

On June 28th it is expected that the people of the nation will assemble at the schools or other designated meeting places in their respective districts and at these meetings pledge themselves to invest systematically in War Savings Stamps. In the words of the President, "The great results which we seek can be obtained only by the participation of every member of the nation, young and old, in a national concerted thrift movement. I, therefore, urge that our people everywhere pledge themselves, as suggested by the Secretary of the Treasury, to the practice of thrift, to serve the Government to their utmost in increasing production in all fields, necessary to the winning of the war; and that the people as evidence of their loyalty invest all that they can save in War Savings Stamps * * * * *." It behooves every citizen of this community to comply with the President's request as outlined above and I do hereby urge that the people of this city set aside June 28th, 1918 as War Savings Day and on that day assemble and consider their obligation to the Government and pledge their loyal support in the prosecution of the war by subscribing for War Savings Stamps according to their means.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 25th day of June, A. D., 1918.

W. O. GARRETT, Mayor.

DRAFT LOTTERY FRIDAY

Will Determine the Order Numbers of the 744,856 Men Enrolled June 5 Under Selective Service Law

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Washington, June 25.—The second draft lottery will be conducted at the capitol Friday morning, it was announced by the war department today. This lottery will determine the order numbers of the 744,856 men enrolled June 5, last, under the selective service law.

The procedure to be followed, it was stated officially today, will be similar to that of last year, when nearly 10,000,000 men were given their relative places in the draft. The same bowl will be used with the capsules containing numbers up to the largest number of registrants in any district in their country.

THRESH OUT PRICES

THRESHERMEN MUST ALL AGREE ON A CERTAIN SCALE

A MEETING IS CALLED

County Food Administrator F. P. Robinson Will Demand That a Standard Scale Be Adopted

County Food Administrator F. P. Robinson has called a meeting of the threshermen of the county to be held next Saturday evening at the court house when the matter of prices to be charged will be taken up and settled.

At a recent meeting of threshermen when about thirty of the eighty machines in the county were represented, it was agreed that the following scale of prices would prevail: Oats 6 cents; wheat and rye 10 cents; millet 20 cents; timothy 40 cents; clover $2.50. There was some dissatisfaction as to the scale and it was agreed to by a minority of the threshermen only.

Mr. Robinson will insist on an equitable scale which must be agreed to by all the machine owners in the county, pointing out that with one outfit charging one price and another a different price, that the grower will wait for the man who will thresh at the lowest price. This, he points out, will result in many fields being neglected and perhaps lost.

Instructions from the food administration are to the effect that an equitable scale of prices must be agreed on by all the threshermen in the county. It is believed that the scale agreed on at the meeting held on June 8 is excessive and somewhat out of proportion, many of the threshermen who were not there having made it known that they will not agree to it and unless a majority of the machine owners will agree to a revised scale that they will make their own individual prices.

Mr. Robinson has notified all machine owners in the county to meet next Saturday night, believing that all can find it convenient to come at that time, and when the matter of prices will be threshed out.

DO NOT MARKET BAD EGGS

Food Administrator Advises That the Dealers Will Candle All That Are Received During the Summer

The whole power of the U. S. food administration and the government will be used to stop the sale of spoiled eggs. Dealers are required to buy all eggs on a candled basis and pay for only the good ones. If the farmers wives try to sell bad eggs from now on they can not do so, and they will be a loss. The best way to prevent this loss is to not have any bad eggs.

Fertile eggs spoil quickly this hot weather, so you should kill, sell or shut up your roosters at once if you have not already done so. Next you should shut up all broody hens every day and keep them confined until they are broken up.

Next collect all eggs every day and keep in a cool place and take them to market at least twice a week.

These things are easy and if you will do them you will have no bad eggs, will save yourself a big loss and will save an immense amount of food for our country.

Yours truly,

F. P. ROBINSON.

Nodaway County Food Administrator.

Plan to Extend Insurance Benefits of Order to Those Who Are Serving With the Colors

Columbus, O., June 25.—The thirty-first annual session of the supreme council of the Order of Commercial Travellers of America opened at the international headquarters of the order here today with Supreme Counselor Thomas J. Phelps of Bluefield, W. Va., presiding. There are 250 delegates, representing every state in the United States and six provinces of Canada.

The chief interest of this session centers in the problem of extending the insurance benefits of the order to those members who have enlisted or been called into military or naval service. There are more than 3,000 members of the order in the war, and under a ruling of Supreme Counselor Phelps these have been carried as fully insured members so long as they remained in continual United States or Canadian territory. It is believed that this ruling will be sustained by the supreme council.

The order is sustaining its fight for good roads and for the improvement and use of inland waterways as a means of improving the transportation situation.

The supreme council will protest against the increase of passenger rates to three cents a mile as being against the interest of the commercial traveller and because it threatens the abolishment of mileage books which are a great convenience to the traveling man.

More or less sentiment is shown for a regulation on the part of Director General McAdoo of railroad travel to relieve the crowded condition of the trains. The United Commercial Travellers hold that this could be done by requiring a permit before purchasing a ticket. The travellers say that many persons who have no business or occasion are travelling about from one military camp to another, and many of them, especially women, are a menace to these camps.

The next supreme counselor of the order will likely be Fred J. C. Cox of Winnipeg, Canada, and if elected he will be the first Canadian that ever held the highest office of the order.

Ed G. Orear of Maryville, a leading and influential member of the order, and a delegate to the convention, left Saturday night to be present at the opening session.

END NEAR FOR AUSTRIA?

THE ARMIES OF ARCHDUKE CHARLES AND GENERAL WURM ARE REPORTED CUT OFF EAST OF THE PIAVE AND SURROUNDED AND MUST SURRENDER OR BE ANNIHILATED

THE PURSUIT GOES ON

ITALIAN ARMY IS ADVANCED BEYOND LINES HELD BEFORE THE OFFENSIVE BEGAN

ITALY IS ABLAZE WITH JOY

Demonstrations Are Held In Rome In Celebration of Victory — Thousands of Prisoners and Great Army Stores Captured

The Italian armies on the Piave are now advancing beyond the lines which they held before the Austrian offensive. The fighting continues with the Austrian rear guard forces trying vainly to stem the Italan advance.

It is unofficially reported that the great Austro-Hungarian army has been cut off in zones east of the Piave and it must surrender or be annihilated.

Sixty thousand prisoners have been counted by the Italians to date and huge stores of booty captured. The Italians continue to pursue the retreating Austrians decimating the ranks that oppose them.

In addition to developments on the Italian front and normal operations of a minor character that daily occur on the western battlefield in France, it is pertinent at this time to consider the political economy happenings of the countries of German alliance. The Austrian morale has been shaken, the nation is in the throes of international unrest. In Germany the food situation is desperate, while a strong pro-German ministry in Bulgaria has collapsed; Turkey is famine stricken and the population has been ravaged by many years of warfare. Without considering the military situation and without heeding the possible inroads of Bolshevikism from the east into the central empires it would appear the economic political condition of the nations of the quadruple alliance are more unfavorable than at any time since the war commenced. On the other hand the political economic positions of the Entente was never better.

London, June 25.—The troops of Archduke Joseph of Austria and General Wurm, in retreat before the Italians and their allies, have been surrounded and must surrender or they will be annihilated, correspondents of the Giornale de Italia today wired from the front, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch.

Washington, June 25.—A cablegram from Rome to the Italian embassy says Italy is ablaze with enthusiasm and joy as a result of the victory.

"The enemy," said the dispatch, "has been beaten back across the Piave from Montello to the sea. Italy is ablaze with enthusiasm and joy.

"A great demonstration of greeting to Italy and the oppressed nationalities of Austria was held last night in the gardens of the British embassy by initiative of the British ambassador. Rumanian officers were present and were received with great applause. These officers and the Rumanian legion are about to leave for the Piave front to fight in the Italian army against the common enemy."

The message received from General Diaz says:

"Yesterday we obtained a great victory. Owing to the extreme pressure of our troops and the continuous fire of the artillery and airplanes, the enemy, after having desperately clung for eight days at the cost of appalling losses to the right bank of the Piave on the night of the 23rd began to retreat to the left bank under our terrific fire.

"The retreat continued during the entire day, protected by strong machine gun contingents and rear guard units, which, after opposing obstinate resistance were successfully overpowered by the impetus of our troops which enveloped Montello and swept over on the entire Piave line, with the exception of a short section at Musile where the fight continues.

"Thus far forty thousand prisoners have been counted and an enormous amount of booty captured. An appalling number of Austrian corpses litter the ground bearing witness to the unfortunate bravery and of the crushing defeat of the enemy."

Victory Is Announced.

Rome, June 25. — Premier Orlando last night publicly announced from the bandstand in the center of a garden party given by the British embassy for disabled soldiers that the Italian army had been victorious on the Piave. Cabinent ministers, members of the diplomatic corps, senators, deputies and other notable persons to the number of several thousand had assembled for the concert.

When the premier declared that the Austro-Hungarians had been forced to retire across the Piave river there was a scene of indescribable enthusiasm among his audience.

The losses to the enemy are described as enormous, both in men killed, wounded or made prisoner.

So hurried was the retrograde movement of the Austrians at some points that they did not take time even to attempt to save their guns and stores, great quantities of which now are in Italian hands.

As yet there has been no sign that the enemy purposes again to renew at an early date another offensive in the mountain region, notwithstanding the fact that reports emanating from Switzerland have said that he was bringing up large reinforcements and great quantities of supplies along the front behind the Swiss border to the upper reaches of the Piave.

Paris, June 25.—North of the Aisne, after a violent bombardment, a major attack developed against the positions captured by the French yesterday northeast of Laporte, said the French war office today. "Our line was held without a break," the report added. Artillery activity developed near Vaerrolles and Torcy. In the Woevre and Lorraine sectors three surprise attacks were delivered by the French and some prisoners were taken.

MAKING HAY.

The following steps in making good hay are usually followed:

1. Cutting; usually with a mower.
2. Stirring the wilted hay with a tedder.
3. Raking the hay with a dump rake, or with the side delivery rake.
4. Cocking the hay.
5. Covering the cocks with caps.
6. Hauling the hay to the mow, or stack, or to the baler.

WHAT GOOD HAY IS LIKE.

High grade hay for animals and for the market should possess the following characteristics:

1. It should be pea green.
2. It should smell sweet, or possess what is called aroma.
3. It should not be stemy or coarse.
4. It should retain as many of the leaves as possible because the leaves are the richest in food nutrients.
5. It should be free from dust.

The making of hay is primarily a matter of reducing the water content of the green forage crops from more than 70 per cent down to less than 20 per cent. Hence in arid sections hay making is comparatively simple, but in Missouri, where our climate is humid, this work is so difficult that very little hay of first class quality reaches the market from our fields and meadows, and even good, cloudy, dewy, rainy weather prevents the making of high-grade hay in a most troublesome and laborious task.

The time and method of handling the hay crop depends upon the following items:

1. The kind of plants to be made into hay.
2. The use to which the crop is to be put whether for cattle, horses, sheep, etc.
3. The time to cut.
4. To secure the least injury to the succeeding hay or seed crop.
5. To obtain the greatest yield of hay.
6. To secure the largest possible amount of digestible food nutrients.

In discussing the above points consideration only the most important and pertinent will be made.

Timothy should be cut when some of the heads are allowed to turn brown and some of the seeds mature, many of the plants will die and the second crop will be light. Nor will the hay be so good if cut too late; therefore the earlier cutting is especially desirable.

As a rule the best time of day for cutting alfalfa or clover is in the late morning or afternoon when the plants are free from dew and contain less water than early in the morning. When well wilted the hay may be tedded. After drying for a few hours it should be raked and put into compact bunches called hay cocks. If the weather is first class for hay making much of it may be in the cock the second day. Hay should remain in the cock from one to four days, depending on conditions. Since the leaves shatter easily from clover and alfalfa such hay should be placed in the cock before it becomes too dry and it should be handled as little as possible in process of making.

COCKING HAY.

In order to secure hay of the highest commercial value it must be cured in such a manner as to retain its green color, its sweet aroma, its leaves and be free from "mow." While curing it may pass through three important stages, drying, bleaching and fermentation. The drying is the removal of the excess moisture and should take place quickly without having been rained on. Hay that is rained on will crack and thus furnish favorable places for molds and fungi which cause it to spoil for market. Bleaching which is caused by the sun laying on the hay, may proceed to the sun, may be avoided by cocking.

Cocking is helpful in the following ways:

1. The surface exposed to the air is not as great as when left in the swath or windrows.
2. It promotes uniform drying.
3. It makes possible the use of caps.
4. If the hay is allowed to remain in the field smaller areas will be covered by the shocks than if left in the windrows.

Proper tedding followed by early raking and cocking will therefore greatly reduce bleaching. Fermentation does not ordinarily start until the hay is placed in the mow or stack. This is a "curing" process and hay is usually better when it has gone through the sweat as it is often called.

When is the best time to put the hay in stacks or mows? Hay should be stacked as soon as it will keep. If it is too wet it will mold, become warm and possibly heat and burn. Overdrying is also undesirable because the leaves are a little brittle and many of them will be lost. The following suggestions will be found helpful in determining when hay contains about 20 per cent moisture and hence is in proper condition to stack or to mow away.

1. A small bunch of it should break without showing moisture when twisted.
2. It should rustle when handled.
3. It should not feel cool when placed on the cheek or on the back of the hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kissinger and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Masters went to Big Lake this afternoon to spend a week.

MILLING LICENSE IS REVOKED

Boone County Mill Closed For One Month by Food Administration

The milling license of the Boone County Milling and Elevator Company in Columbia has been revoked by Herbert Hoover, United States food administrator, on a charge of failure to comply with the rules and regulations of the United States food administration regarding prices to be charged for mill feeds.

The mill, between January 1 and May 1, was accused of having charged $1 a hundred for bran and $2.05 a hundred for shorts. These prices are in excess of those permitted to be charged by the rules and regulations of the food administration, which became effective December 25.

Permission has been granted the milling company to apply for a reissuance of the license on or after July 15. This means the mill can do no milling business until after that date. Purchases of wheat may be made during this thirty-day period, but no grain of any kind may be ground. This permission to buy wheat was given to provide a market for the grain now being harvested.

Permissions on hand may be disposed of.

BOYS MAY WIN TRIP TO FAIR

State Association Will Pay All Expenses—Examinations Will Be Held Here On July 6

The Missouri State Fair is continuing its policy of offering to one boy from each county in the state the opportunity to attend the state fair at the expense of the state board of agriculture. This boy is to be selected on Saturday, July 6, at Maryville by an examination in arithmetic, geography and agriculture and an essay on "The Farm Boy's Part in Winning the War." The boy making the highest grades will be given the right to attend the fair and the Boys' State Fair School. The one making the second highest grade will be chosen as an alternate and will have the right to attend in case the other cannot.

The state fair board will pay all expenses and furnish comfortable quarters in the boys camp. The meals will be prepared and served in the Woman's building by the faculty of the domestic science department of one of the state Normal schools. The boys will be in charge of the same management as in former years and the board will spare no pains in making them comfortable and giving them a profitable and pleasant week.

The program this year, consisting of demonstrations of war activities and war equipment, aeroplanes, trench warfare, etc., make it especially attractive for young men with good red American blood in their veins.

The dates of the fair are August 10-17. The examinations will be given and the selection made by County Superintendent Bert Cooper and the chairman of the county council of defense.

Soldier's Letters

A REQUEST FOR TOBACCO.

Floyd Reynolds Writes From France Asking for "the Makins'."

The following letter has been received from Floyd Reynolds with the 139th Infty., by his father:

Somewhere in France, May 27, 1918.

Dear Father:

I will drop you a few lines to let you know I am in the best of health and do hope you are the same. Everything is quiet here where we are. When you answer this write and tell me if you received the allotment papers.

I am only two miles from "Peaceful." I was up to see him the other day, and he is getting along fine.

If you can send over some American Bull Durham, it would sure be fine, for you cannot get tobacco here that is much good.

We are seeing some sights, places that have been here for centuries.

I will close hoping to hear from you in the near future.

I remain as ever,

Your son,
FLOYD REYNOLDS,
Co. L, 139th U. S. Infty.,

FOREWORD.

This is the day of the specialist. The individual that strives to cover too much ground usually covers little of it well. Those who concentrate their efforts toward one line of endeavor are most likely to excel in that line.

Dr. Prettyman's efforts are devoted exclusively to the treatment of Nervous and Chronic Diseases and it is fair to presume that he excels in that line.

His consultation is always free to the sick. He will be at the New Linville Hotel, Monday, July 1.

Accepted Position in St. Joseph.

ALL EGG DEALERS MUST GET LICENSE

Food Administration Imposes Heavy Penalty for Failure to Heed Poultry and Egg Regulations

All dealers in poultry and eggs (except those who sell exclusively to consumers) must now have a food administration license regardless of the amount of business they do. This includes country merchants who buy from the producers or take eggs in exchange and ship them or resell them to shippers.

Those who have not secured their license must write at once to "U. S. Food Administration, Law Department, License Division, Washington, D. C." and apply for license. They will send you the necessary blanks for you to fill out and return and there will be no charges for the license.

Five Thousand Dollar Fine for Dealing Without License.

Any person subject to license who does business without a license is subject to a fine of five thousand dollars or by two years imprisonment, or by both fine and imprisonment.

If you apply for a license at once you may continue business until the license is received, but do not continue business until you have applied for the license.

The food administration rules positively prohibit a licensee from dealing in any way with any person subject to license who has not secured a license.

All licensed dealers are required to observe the following rules.

(a). Buy only edible eggs.

(b). Purchase eggs only on a candled basis and make no payment in any form for those that are unfit for food. Dealers shall discard all eggs known as "yolk stuck to the shell," "heavy blood rings," "partially hatched," "moldy eggs," "black spots," "black rots," and any other eggs of an unwholesome nature.

(c). To give to each customer from whom eggs are purchased a statement showing the number of good, damaged and bad eggs in each lot and if possible return to producer the "rejects" for his examination.

(d). Keep a copy of each statement for the duration of the candling season to be subject to examination by the U. S. food administration, federal, state, county and municipal food inspectors.

(e). To handle eggs in accordance with such simple rules as will prevent spoilage while in their possession.

(f). To place in every case of candled eggs on the top layer a candling certificate as per copy inclosed.

(g). To give careful attention to the suggestions on the back of the candling certificate.

FOLK OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR SENATORSHIP

DELIVERS KEYNOTE ADDRESS TO IMMENSE THRONG AT ST. JOSEPH.

Pledges Support to President Wilson and Urges Vigorous Prosecution of the War.

Reviews Official Career and Makes Timely Reference to Great Economic Problems Growing Out of the War.

Joseph W. Folk opened his campaign for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator at St. Joseph Saturday. He was greeted by an immense audience that gave him a most flattering reception, indicating he had lost none of his old-time popularity. The address, in full, was as follows:

ADDRESS OF JOSEPH W. FOLK, ST. JOSEPH, MO., JUNE 15th, 8 P. M.

The thought of winning the war must be the sentiment above all others in this crisis. The American people are united as never before in stern and resolute purpose. They are slow to arouse, but in the great heart of the nation there has steadily awakened that inherent loyalty to American ideals that has carried this Republic triumphantly through every crisis thus far encountered. We have before us a gigantic task and a task upon the accomplishment of which depends all we have hoped for and striven for during the century and a half of our existence.

Before we entered the war Americans had a right to be neutral as between other nations. The American who is neutral now is guilty of treason to the Republic. Any man or woman not aggressively for the United States in this war must be counted as against the United States. Whatever our internal differences may have been, in such a time as this we must be one people, loyal to a common country and devoted to a common flag. We must speak as one, act as one, and serve as one.

Millions of America's sons have answered to the Nation's call. They should have the full support of heart, soul and spirit of all American men and women; for in the name of America and in behalf of America they have gone forth to battle in order that American honor may be sustained, American freedom preserved, to make the world safe for the common man and to make international justice supreme. The withholding of such support by any individual or organization is disloyalty to the Government and treason to the flag. In this crucial test of the fiber of the American spirit, the future historian, I believe, will record the full fidelity of a great people to the principles of liberty and justice which America's sons are upholding on land and sea.

The war will be over when it has been won by America and the allies and not before. This world cannot exist part free and part Prussian; it must be, and will be, when the war is over, either all Prussian or all free, including Prussia. Prussian militarism is a menace to the peace of the world, for there can be no enduring peace until further criminal aggressions against other nations by the Prussian military autocracy have been rendered impossible.

President Wilson, who is guiding the destinies of this Republic in these troublous times with such a clear head and steady hand should be upheld by all who claim to be Americans. No President in our history has had the American people so solidly behind him as the people are behind President Wilson today. Supporting the President and giving him inspiration in this grave hour are the mighty hosts of American free men, willing to serve and to sacrifice for the honor and the safety of the Republic and freedom of the world. President Wilson said in his Flag Day address last year:

"For us there is but one choice. We have made it. Woe to the man or group of men that seeks to stand in our way in this day of high resolution, when every principle we hold dearest is to be vindicated and made secure for the salvation of the nations. We are ready to plead at the bar of history and our flag shall wear a new lustre. Once more we shall make good with our lives and fortunes the great faith to which we were born, and a new glory shall shine in the face of our people."

This is the supreme hour in the life of this Republic and of the world. A new economic and social order is emerging in every land and a new internationalism is being produced by the blood and suffering of mankind. The chief element of strength the nations are welding in the crucible of battle is the spirit of service of the common good that we see manifested all around us. Men are finding their souls amid the din and thunder of battle. Women are learning the sweet consolation of service for the welfare of all. The things that are most important today are things spiritual rather than things material. The spiritualizing effects of this war are rainbowing the tears of a blood drenched world with the assurance of a better and more splendid day that will dawn for all humanity when the war is ended in victory for the allies, which is the only way it can rightly end. If, perchance, Germany should succeed, then the light of civilization would be extinguished, slavery would take the place of freedom, and we would go back to the darkness of the Middle Ages. But, so long as America is true to liberty and justice, freedom cannot die, and Government of the people, for the people, and by the people will not perish from the earth.

We are in a state of transition and are passing from the political era of the conflict of classes to the new era of co-operation. The new thought is of the producers, those who toil in farm or factory, and in other ways. This war has taught us that in order to save our national life and to save the world we must co-operate, and all classes have co-operated. That same spirit of co-operation should continue after the war is over and the spirit of service that has come with the war should not go when the war has ended. As so eloquently said by democracy's great leader, President Wilson:

"May not those who toil and those who have made common cause of the larger hope for the masses of mankind take renewed heart as we talk of these days when America has taken its stand for the rights of humanity and the fellowship of social and international justice?"

The end of the war will mark the dawn of a new day in world co-operation for the advancement of the common good. The people will no longer be those of one section or of one nation, but all mankind, and the rights of nations throughout the world will be recognized and enforced by the common will through federated action. If there shall be born from the agony of Europe's battle fields an irresistible demand for some fair international arrangement to maintain the permanent peace of the world, the sacrifices of blood and treasure will not have been in vain.

Men and women now living may see the time when the ideal of public right will be supreme through out the world. Out of the black clouds of war that now envelop the earth may come a greater realization of the necessity for an international court of arbitration with power to enforce its decrees. Then will begin that time foretold of old, following the last great battle of the world, when there will be peace on earth and good will in the hearts of the children of men. The mission of America is to educate the world to this desired consummation. To fulfill this mission there must be loyalty and devotion to the ideals of America among the people of America. It is the mission of America by practical example to enlighten the world, not only as to the rights of men, but as to the duties of men toward their fellowmen.

The greatest domestic problem, both during the war and after the war, is that of transportation. As Chief Counsel of the Interstate Commerce Commission for four years I saw the process of transportation regulation and had an unusual opportunity to study transportation problems from the inside. Transportation is carried on chiefly by rail and by water. The railroad is a comparatively new means of transportation. It has only been about eighty years since the first railroad was operated. In their beginning railroads were merely local affairs; no one foresaw that they would become the great arteries of commerce that they are today. In their rapid growth it was but natural that injustices should creep in. There was discrimination between shippers, whereby some shippers were built up at the expense of others. This was one of the principal causes of the enactment of the Act to Regulate Commerce in 1887, and by the amendments to that act in 1906 and 1910 discrimination as between individual shippers was practically eliminated. Now we have the question of discrimination as between communities in different parts of the country, which, likewise, should be ended.

St. Louis, Kansas City, and Missouri are discriminated against in the present adjustment of rates. No city, or state, can prosper as it should prosper until such a disadvantage is overcome. Through rate discriminations the St. Louis gateway has been partially closed and Missouri which is midway between the North, South, East and West, and by reason of its location should have an advantage in rates possessed by no other state, is made to suffer because those in control of transportation agencies have made the Chicago gateway the favorite to the prejudice of the St. Louis gateway. During the next two years there will be a readjustment of all these rates, and there should be a weeding out of any inequalities that exist. If I can be of any service in aiding the people of Missouri in obtaining that justice in transportation rates to which they are entitled, I shall do my very best to represent the people of this state faithfully and well.

The railroads have made a practice of suppressing water competition by making rates so low that water carriers could not compete. Then, when the water carriers were forced out of business the railroads would raise the rates again, thus recouping what was lost. The individually owned, or weakly financed water carrier could not compete with the great aggregations of capital composing railroad corporations and so it came about that in the development of the railroads our inland waterways were virutally eliminated as transportation agencies.

Transportation is a government function, and in order to promote the efficiency of rail carriers in the movement of traffic during the war, the Government has taken over the control of the railways. Under Government control and operation the policy should be to encourage water transportation, not to destroy it. In order to effectively carry on the war it is necessary to move troops, war supplies, and foodstuffs. The railroads now are congested and it is essential to use the waterways in order to transport the things that should be moved to insure success in the war. The railroads and the waterways, both agencies of transportation, should be co-ordinated under Government control. Surely, if the Government finances the railroads, which it does not own, it should finance the waterways, which it does own.

This is a war of resources as well as of men, and it is as necessary to mobilize our resources as it is to mobilize our man power. The mobilization of resources cannot be effectively carried out unless the waterways are used to their fullest extent. The water carriers which could not compete with the heavily financed rail carriers of course cannot compete with the Government-financed rail carriers, so in order to use the waterways it is necessary for the Government to exercise the power conferred by the recent railroad act in financing the water carriers. When this is done the Mississippi River and the Missouri River will assume an importance in transportation such as they never had before, even in their palmiest days.

If there were no Missouri River, and no Mississippi River the project of building canals would be seriously considered, but we have these waterways ready for use, and it is criminal not to use them, both during the war and thus shorten the war, and after the war in the morning of a new and greater prosperity.

The old rivalry between the waterways and the railroads should no longer exist but together they should make up a transportation system performing that governmental function of this great and glorious nation. Each is necessary to the other, and each is a supplement of the other.

America must make ready for that economic era that will be upon us when the battle flags are furled. The organized and disciplined energies of the nations now at war will be at their height and their scientific application to industry will be at their maximum. In order for America to keep pace with this after-the-war commercial development, there must be a co-ordination of all our activities, and during the war commerce should be kept up for no useful industry is unnecessary unless it interferes with the conduct of the war. We are in this war and we must see it through to a victorious conclusion. We must provide all the arms and equipment that can be transported to Europe, and we must build ships as rapidly as possible; we must keep our manufacturing organizations in good running order; and we must prepare for the competition in foreign markets that will occur after the war.

President Wilson has said politics is now adjourned. The world is on fire and petty political discussions or partisan speeches are out of place. The question for each to ask now is, how may I best serve? When I returned to St. Louis after five years' service with the administration in Washington, to take up the fight to free St. Louis and Missouri from the chains of unjust rate discrimination, I did not do so with the idea of running for the Senate, but the death of Senator Stone created a new and unexpected situation. The demand came from every part of the State to permit the use of my name as his successor. It was insisted that by reason of my experience as solicitor for the Department of State, and as Chief Counsel of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and from my knowledge of affairs at Washington, I could be of special service just now to Missouri and to the nation. This demand became so imperative through letters, telegrams and personal visits as to be irresistible. I found that obeying the call to become a candidate for Senator would not interfere with my continuing the fight for St. Louis and Missouri for freedom from rate discriminations, and that in the Senate I could complete the work better than in private life. In this grave hour everyone should, regardless of personal sacrifices, take that place to which he may be called where he can render the best and highest service. Thus in this spirit I have become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

If nominated and elected, my policy in the Senate will be 100 per cent Americanism. I shall whole-heartedly support the President and uphold his policies in the vigorous and victorious conduct of the war. To aid in winning the war speedily and worthily my every effort shall be constantly directed. At such a time as this the wish of the President is the command of my country.

I want the co-operation and support of all those who believe President Wilson should be upheld, the war waged unceasingly until brought to a victorious end, and that I can help in bringing about this result as well as in solving transportation questions, while the war is going on and after it is over.

During my official career it has been my duty to prosecute law breakers, and wrongdoers of high degree. Many of these are opposing me now. That is their privilege, and if the opposition wishes support of that kind, the opposition is welcome to it. As Circuit Attorney of St. Louis it became my duty to expose and prosecute grafters, and in doing so I aroused the animosity of some influential beneficiaries of the system of graft. If anyone thinks that I did wrong in exposing and punishing graft it is the right of that person to vote against me. I may say, though, that fifteen years have passed by since these prosecutions and no one has been able to point to a single act of injustice done.

As Governor of Missouri it was my privilege to recommend and secure the enactment of a law prohibiting race track gambling, which had been the cause of the ruin of so many young men through making them embezzlers and thieves and sending them on their way to the penitentiary. Since then, the example of Missouri has been followed in nearly all the other states. That law was enforced. If anyone thinks I did wrong in ending this evil, it is his right to vote against me.

I recommended the Initiative and Referendum and Primary Law, because I believed, and still believe, that the nearer Government can be brought to the people the better than Government will be, and that if the people cannot be trusted to govern themselves no one else can be trusted to govern them. Some have never liked this change from the old, under which the will of the people was subordinated to the will of the selfish few. If anyone thinks I did wrong in recommending these measures it is his right to vote against me.

While Governor, I enforced the liquor laws and caused the liquor interests to obey the law as other interests were required to obey the law. Some of those who demanded the privileges of lawlessness are now fighting me and demanding my defeat. In letters and circulars sent broadcast over the state they are commanding the Democrats of Missouri not to vote for me.

Will the Democrats of Missouri bend their backs to the whip lashes of the lawless lionor interests and do their bidding? Will they permit the liquor interests secretly, and "under cover" to dominate the politics of the State? I do not want the support of the lawless or the sympathizers with the enemies of the United States or the enemies of the laws of the state. I have no apologies to make for compelling the liquor interests to observe the statutes the same as anyone else, and I would do the same thing again. So far from regretting, I am proud of the enemies I have made in my official career. If I had served the lawless with half the fidelity I have tried to serve the people, the lawless would now be singing my praises instead of denouncing me on every hand as they are. In proof of my sincerity I point to the enemies I have made. After all, is not this the best proof? I have found it a very good way to determine on which side one should fight, to look and see under which flag the public enemies are fighting, then get on the other side and oppose them. The application of this rule is all that I ask from the Democrats of Missouri. I do not mean to say, of course, all who oppose me are of this class for there are many on the other side who are not, but it is undoubtedly true that the malignant opposition does come from this class and these realize that a message will go from the result of this primary to those who have the power to enforce the laws as to whether they may ever hope for political preferment should they dare treat politically powerful lawbreakers the same as common lawbreakers are treated. What will the message be? The lawless liquor dealers in their circular ask, "What is the answer of Missouri?" From present indications the Democrats of Missouri will answer them in thunder tones.

I am a Democrat; I have always been a Democrat, and I believe in the principles of Democracy, which, under the leadership of President Wilson has now become the dominant thought of the world. I do not propose to allow lawless liquor dealers to control the Democratic party in this State if I can help it. Is that good politics, or bad politics? Let the Democrats of the State answer.

When the late Senator Stone passed away, the law permitted the Governor to make a mere temporary appointment to hold until the people could express their will and name a Senator of their own choosing.

We are fighting to give the people of all the world self government, and this is not the time to ask the Democrats of Missouri to give up their self government. We are waging a war to democratize the world; this is not time to endeavor to undemocratize Missouri. We are going to overthrow the German Kaiser and the people of Missouri are in no mood to set up a political kaiser here. The Democratic party of Missouri does not belong to any man, or to any class, click or clan, but it belongs to the rank and file, who do their own thinking and their own voting as free men, without orders from any one.

The democracy that we are fighting for seeks more government by the people, not less government by the people; it believes laws are made to be enforced, not to be ignored; it does not array class against class but preserves the rights of all by causing each to respect the rights of the other; it equalizes conditions, not by dragging down those who are up, but by lifting up those who are down; it does not attack wealth honestly acquired but wages unending war against the privileges that produce unearned wealth on one hand and undeserved poverty on the other; it protects property rights, but recognizes the fact that property rights should never be inconsistent with human rights; it gives to each man an equal opportunity to live and labor upon the earth that God has given to all, and to enjoy untrammeled and unrestricted the gains of honest toil; the democracy that means more of service and less of selfishness.

The capacity of a people for self government is to be determined not by the extent of a nation's dominions, but by the happiness and welfare of the average individual. It is the average man for whom America stands, for his freedom and his right to participate in government, and it is for him that this Republic has become the torch bearer of liberty for all mankind. This is the democracy in which I believe and which I shall continue to advocate.

RULES FOR HOUSEHOLDERS.

All kinds of food, especially wheat, meats, fats and sugar should be economically used.

No food shall be hoarded. Hoarding is the holding, contracting, or arranging for food by any person in excess of his reasonable requirements for use or consumption by himself and dependents for a reasonable time. This does not refer to stocks of home grown vegetables and home canned or preserved fruits.

All householders who can entirely eliminate the use of wheat until the next harvest, about September 1, should do so.

Householders who are obliged to use wheat should not use more than a total of 1½ pounds of wheat flour or prepared wheat, in any form, per person per week, including the wheat flour in Victory Bread, and including the wheat flour or prepared wheat in crackers, pastry, macaroni, breakfast and other foods.

Victory Bread is bread manufactured by bakers under the rules of the United States Food Administration. In estimating flour consumption 1¾ pounds of Victory Bread may be considered equal to 1 pound of wheat flour.

In buying wheat flour an equal weight of other cereals as substitutes for wheat must be bought pound for pound. This is the 50-50 Rule. In buying mixed flours, the substitutes in them may be counted so that a smaller proportion of substitutes may be bought with these flours than with white flour. In buying graham and whole wheat flours, (containing not less than 95 per cent of the entire wheat) 6-10 pounds of substitutes shall be purchased with every pound of such flours.

Wheat flour substitutes are hominy, corn grits, cornmeal, corn flour, edible corn starch, barley flour, rolled oats, oatmeal, rice, rice flour, buckwheat flour, potato flour, sweet potato flour, soya bean flour and feterita flour and meals.

Householders in towns and cities may not buy more than ⅛ of a barrel of flour or 2 pounds of sugar at any one time. Householders in the country may not buy more than ¼ of a barrel of flour or 5 pounds of sugar at any one time. In no event shall any purchaser have more than 30 days supply of either on hand.

Householders should not use more than ¾ pounds of sugar per person per week.

In addition to the above, however, sugar may be used for home canning, and will be available to the householder for that purpose upon his signing a certificate that such sugar is desired and will be used only for that purpose.

No wheat flour, or prepared wheat in any form, should be used for any purpose other than human consumption. No wheat fit for human consumption should be used for other purposes.

Meats of all kinds and poultry, and more particularly beef, should be most economically used, eliminating all waste. Purchases of these products should be restricted and the quantity prepared for each meal reduced. Consumption of all meats, including poultry, should be reduced as nearly as possible to 2 pounds per week per person over 4 years old.

Fresh milk and milk in evaporated and condensed form and cheese may be liberally used.

Butter may be used for normal consumption.

No more ice should be used than is absolutely necessary.

Certain modifications of these rules for householders are made by federal food administrators in certain states.

To save transportation local supplies should be grown and used.

These regulations are necessarily subject to change at any time as the needs of the Allies and our own needs demand.
